

Pride in Your Country

I cannot sing “The Star Spangled Banner” without crying. There I am with my hand over my heart, tears streaming, like I just won the Olympics or something. My daughter wonders why I’m not singing. I’m just too choked up. I really am so tenderhearted when it comes to pride in the U.S.A. I am so glad to live in America. Grateful for those who have gone before and paved the way. Thankful for freedom. Proud to be part of such an amazing country. Wherever you are from . . . be proud. Display your flag. Celebrate!
